Section 3: Program Preference

There will be four courses offered at the Institute (see program page on Website). They are programmed so that two courses are offered simultaneously (two during mornings and two during afternoons), allowing participants to choose two courses. There will also be some general sessions which all participants can attend. Please indicate which courses you are interested in attending. By indicating this information you are not guaranteed a place in that course: please register early, as registrations will be processed on a first-come-first-served basis.

Morning courses:

Discourse analysis

OR

Language description

Afternoon courses:

Computational tools#

OR

Intonation analysis

For the Computational Tools course, participants will need to bring a laptop. Further information will be provided.
